Kerry Pither's critically acclaimed book Dark Days tells the story of a Canadian national security investigation gone wrong through the eyes of four of its targets: Ahmad El Maati, Abdullah Almalki, Maher Arar and Muayyed Nureddin.

All were accused of terrorist links, but no evidence was ever produced. All were detained overseas and subjected to brutal torture.

All were interrogated with questions from Canadian agencies. All were eventually released and returned to Canada to demand answers. All want to ensure this never happens again.

CBC's Terry MacLeod and the Winnipeg Blue Bombers' Obby Khan will read from Dark Days with author Kerry Pither. The reading will be followed by a discussion with the audience and book signing.

"Sober, well written and horrific. Grit your teeth and read. These are your rights too." — Bestselling author, John le Carré

"Brilliant." — Robert Fisk, The Independent
